Declaration of unmarried cohabitation*

The insured person declares:

1. that the insured person and the cohabiting partner have taken note of the regulatory provisions of Profelia whereby, under certain conditions, the cohabiting partner may have an entitlement in the event of the death of the person insured.
2. that no family relationship exists between the insured person and the cohabiting partner to the extent of prohibiting marriage.
3. that the insured person or the pensioner and the cohabiting partner are not married or bound by a registered partnership between them or with a third party.
4. that the cohabiting partner does not receive any survivor's benefit, whether as spouse, registered partner or surviving cohabiting partner.
5. that the insured person and the cohabiting partner have been in a continuous partnership since and/or provide maintenance of one or several common children.

The present declaration, duly completed and signed, should reach Profelia during the lifetime of the insured person.

Any modification is to be notified in writing. The formation of a new unmarried cohabitation must be the object of a new declaration of cohabiting partnership, duly completed and signed, sent to Profelia during the lifetime of the person insured.

The present notification does not automatically entitle the cohabitant to the benefit.

Upon the death of the person insured, Profelia determines whether the regulatory conditions carrying the right to the benefit are met.

To this effect, Profelia is authorised to require from the cohabiting partner any document enabling the existence and recognition of the cohabitation to be established.

If the required documents are not received, Profelia may refuse to grant the benefits.
